The sun shone a crystalline brilliance and spread shafts of warm light shooting off water droplets that clung to the newly minted maple leaves. Puffy-white ship-clouds pirouetted playfully as they sailed across the azure lake of the sky. Amorous songbirds flirted, letting loose an elegant symphony of songs to herald the majesty of Spring.

:):
A dirty darkness swallowed the sky like a twice starved beast tossing menacing tantrums of sleet and rain. Torrents of wind blasts with a pain filled loathing while brutally stealing warmth from desperate huddled bodies, tearing and whipping at loose clothing.

Rinse and Repeat. ↗

Perky little hasher people gather, gaily raising toasts in the tender warmth of the sun. Flitting to and fro, meeting and greeting, bird-like in their revelry.

:):
Grumpy little hasher people draw up their hoods against the barrage of pelting rain, brooding and stewing in murky thoughts as they trudge back to the safety of their vehicles.

Rinse and Repeat. ↗

Gliding through the glistening sylvan trail, winding among the stately oak and demure maple. Down into valleys of the awakening season, across lush green meadows. Slender ribbons of single track trail undulating under foot. Through a billowing field of knee-high wheat with Just Jacob's hair caught up in the breeze like Julie Andrews in the "Sound of Music".

:):
Dodging past blackberry brambles that rent and tear, ducking low through tunnels of growth that shoot out branch fingers that poke at the eye. Slogging through swamp mud that greedily sucks at shoes in an effort to keep them prisoner in the ooze.

Shiggilicious Hash. And, rub-a-dub-dub, really enjoyed the grub!
