With this many hares, the trail has to be amazing! Sorry to disappoint, but as we all know half-mind arithmetic doesn't work that way... One can only assume that they needed everyone as this was not only a PITT / PGH crossover, but lest we forget, the great Sandturkey trail!

This year the Sandturkey hunters met at the Brunswick Playmor bowling alley, on the farthest outskirts of the city. In lieu of the traditional hash cash, hashers could bring in a donation for the food bank. The forgetful paid the usual amount. Curmudgeons paid nothing. The truly smart bought cans next door at the Dollar General.

While the hounds were blinded by the presence of such bowling luminaries as Donny, Walter and The Dude, the surly sandturkey gave them the slip and made for the local suburbs.

With the hounds hot on its heels, the sandturkey took a turn for the safety of the local neighborhood graveyard. Some of the hashers managed to find long lost relatives, while others simply took the opportunity to down a few not-so-tasty shots.

Trying for deeper cover our felonious fowl headed for the local woodlands. The hounds were occasionally distracted by both long-forgotten high schooler beer caches and poorly laid trail marks.

After one last attempt to evade the pack by looping around the local park, the sandturkey lost its way and surrendered to the hounds surprisingly close to a pile of their empty cans.

Whether it was the sandturkey or the hash curmudgeon whom switched marks on trail will be a topic for Sandturkey lore hereafter.

Fair warning: the bowling alley is about as far out as one can get yet still remain in the city limits, so expect more uninspired trails around this area.

Bon appétit, T-Boner
